Mission of 2019 GIML Conference:

The 7th International Conference on Music Learning Theory will promote dialogue and reflection through research and educational sessions by presenters from around the world. The conference will provide relevant professional development and musical opportunities that support a comprehensive music education for educators and their students.

About GIML & Music Learning Theory

The purpose of the Gordon Institute for Music Learning is to advance music understanding through audiation.

Music Learning Theory is an explanation of how we learn when we learn music. Based on an extensive body of research and practical field-testing by Edwin E. Gordon and others, Music Learning Theory provides the music teacher a comprehensive sequence for teaching musicianship with understanding.

Edwin E. Gordon (1925-2015)

Edwin E. Gordon is widely remembered as a researcher, teacher, author, editor and lecturer. He and his work have been portrayed nationally on the NBC Today Show, in the New York Times, and in USA Today.

Through extensive research, Dr. Gordon has made major contributions in the study of music aptitudes, audiation, music learning theory, tonal patterns, rhythm patterns and music development in infants and very young children. He is the author of six highly regarded music aptitude tests, in addition to numerous books, articles and research monographs.
